Piers Sellers is an astronaut who flew on two Shuttle missions to the International Space Station; STS-112 in 2002, and STS-121 in 2006. On each mission he carried out three spacewalks. Piers will show you what its like to go into space with the help of video, some great pictures and some cheap props. Anyone who is interested in Space, complex engineering and the future of space exploration is encouraged to attend. Before becoming an astronaut, Piers worked as a scientist on climate problems at the NASA Goddard Spaceflight Center. He collaborated closely with the climate research group here at CSU.
